

CONTENTS

PAUL ISELIN WELLMAN: AMERICAN WRITER By Thomas Fox Averill	1
CAUGHT IN A BLIZZARD By Forrest Hintz	12
WINDS OF THE VALLEY By Barbara Booth	16
LANGUAGE AS PIONEERING IN WRIGHT MORRIS'S THE FIELD OF VISION AND CEREMONY IN LONE TREE By Diana Saluri	19
KANSAS CONGRESSMEN DURING THE HARDING-COOLIDGE ERA By Philip A. Grant	25

CONTRIBUTORS

Thomas Averill is Assistant Professor of English at Washburn University in Topeka, Kansas, where he teaches classes in creative writing and Kansas literature. Professor Averill is interested in Kansas writers and is a Kansas writer himself. He is currently working on a novel set in Kansas.

Forrest Hintz is a retired Kansas feature writer for the Wichita Eagle-Beacon. Mr. Hintz was a train dispatcher for the Missouri Pacific Railroad for twenty-three years and a writer for the Eagle-Beacon for twenty years. He continues to write in his retirement.

Barbara Booth is a free lance writer from Clay Center, Kansas. "Winds of the Valley" is a story about her great, great grandparents related to her by her mother who was born and spent her childhood years in Diamond Springs, Kansas.

Diana Saluri works as an editor at the American College Testing Center in Iowa City, Iowa, and is Adjunct Assistant Professor of English at the University of Iowa. Her doctoral dissertation was "Other Pioneering: A Rhetorical Analysis of Wright Morris's Multiple Viewpoint Fiction."

Philip A. Grant, Jr. is an Adjunct Professor of History at the Dyson College of Pace University in New York City. His research is in political history and he is also the author of "Northern Great Plains Congressmen and Farm Legislation, 1933-1938," published in Heritage of the Great Plains in the Summer - 1982.