

HERITAGE OF THE GREAT PLAINS

FORAGING THE FLINT HILLS:

A Guidebook for Identifying Edible and Medicinal Plants

by Tom Eddy

Foraging the Flint Hills	1
Introduction	2
Edible and Medicinal Plants	7
Glossary	48
Species Index	50
Notes	51
Bibliography	55

Tom Eddy has a Ph.D. in Entomology from Kansas State University, and is a professor of biology at Emporia State University. His research and teaching concentrate on the biology of the grassland. He is well-known to Kansas teachers for his off-campus courses which emphasize the interpretation of prairie ecology.

Editor
Ron McCoy

Managing Editor
Julie Johnson

Editorial Board

Tom Averill, Department of English, Washburn University
Irene Bennett Brown, Jefferson, Oregon
Wakefield Dort, Jr., Department of Geology, University of Kansas
James Hoy, Department of English, Emporia State University
Tom Isern, Dean, Humanities & Social Sciences, North Dakota State University
L. O. Moses, Department of History, Oklahoma State University
John Peterson, Professor Emeritus, Emporia State University
Sara Tucker, Department of History, Washburn University
Raymond Wilson, Department of History, Fort Hays State University

Volume XXVI

Winter 1993

No. 1

Heritage of the Great Plains is published semi-annually by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and the Center for Great Plains Studies of Emporia State University, 1200 Commercial, Emporia, Kansas, 66801-5087. Copyright, 1980 by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. All rights reserved.

ISSN 0739-4772